COURT'S JIS DIRECTOR TO ATTEND NIJ CORRECTIONS TECHNOLOGY INSTITUTE

Winnie Webber, Director of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit Court's Judicial Information Services, was recently notified that she had been accepted as a participant in the annual week-long 2010 National Institute of Justice (NIJ) Corrections Technology Institute (CXTI). "Winnie applied for the program and was one of only 25 representatives selected from around the country," said Chief Judge Victoria Rossetti. "Our circuit is fortunate to have a Judicial Information Services division which works to improve communications and maximize efficiency in our workplace."

Winnie has been with the Nineteenth Circuit since April 1994. She has a B.S. degree in math and computer science from the University of Manila. In May 2010, she received the title of Fellow of the Institute for Court Management in a ceremony lead by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice John G. Roberts, Jr. at the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington, D.C.

The National Institute of Justice is the research and development arm of the United States Department of Justice. The mission of the NIJ is to look at new and emerging technologies within the corrections and law enforcement communities in an effort to examine public safety needs for the future. Participants in the technology institute will meet and interact with corrections professionals, receive and exchange information about existing and developing technologies, share experiences, and present creative solutions to technology issues they face. The training will be held in Baltimore, Maryland the week of September 19-24, 2010. All expenses associated with the training are funded by the National Institute of Justice.
