COURT DIRECTOR ELECTED TO NATIONAL TECHNOLOGY COMMITTEE

Winnie Webber, Director of the Judicial Information Services Division (JIS) for the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit, has been elected as a member of the board of directors of the court information technology officers consortium (CITOC), according to Chief Judge Victoria Rossetti. "Winnie is our go to person who, with her staff, ensures that all court systems; e.g., internet, legal research, email and mobile technology are functioning properly on a daily basis. Because of Winnie's expertise, the 19th Circuit has always been on the cutting edge of technological advancement in providing information and access to the community which supports the mission of the Court."

CITOC is an organization comprised of chief information technology officers (CIOs) that include members from around the country who work in statewide court systems and appellate courts. Membership in CITOC requires approval by either the state court administrator or the court manager of the jurisdiction. CITOC is the only organization in the United States chartered solely for individuals who work in courts on court technology.

CITOC was chartered in 2005 by the Conference of State Court Administrators (COSCA) and the National Association for Court Management (NACM) for the purpose of supporting their efforts to use technology to improve the management and administration of courts. The National Center for State Courts serves as the secretariat for the consortium.

Ms. Webber has been with the 19th Judicial Circuit over 17 years. She has a BS in Math and Computer Science from the University of Manila. She earned the title of Fellow of the Institute for Court Management in 2010.
